Banksy: Who Owns an Anonymous Voice?

Student pack · Seconde bac pro · A2 and B1

Cover photograph: a mural widely attributed to Banksy, Gymnast with a Ribbon, Irpin, Ukraine, 2022. Photograph by Rasal Hague, 18 November 2022, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

Designed by Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac

BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019 · Six lessons of 55 minutes

https://itineraires-destinations.fr/banksy-who-owns-an-anonymous-voice/

conçu par Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac, mis en page par Grok

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Anglais · Seconde bac pro (all streams) · A2 and B1 (CEFR)

Banksy: Who Owns an Anonymous Voice?

Six lessons of 55 minutes, designed by Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac. Programme de langues vivantes, BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019, classes préparant au baccalauréat professionnel. Two clear pathways in every lesson, A2 and B1, on the same works and the same questions. Every lesson names the activités langagières it practises, with CECRL descriptors.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A mural widely attributed to Banksy, Gymnast with a Ribbon, painted in 2022 on a damaged building in Irpin, Ukraine (Severynivska Street). Photograph by Rasal Hague, 18 November 2022, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected. This is not the handstand gymnast in Borodianka, a different mural that Banksy posted on Instagram.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Why this sequence?

Banksy paints on walls, in streets, on hotels and in temporary parks. The works use a language of their own: they are slogans, but in the form of drawings. Sometimes there are words on the wall. Sometimes the picture itself is the sentence, and the place (a canal, a camera, a ruined building, a gift shop) is part of what is said. A work on a wall often has no civil name beside it. The public meets the image first, and the author only as a signature, a rumour or a newspaper claim.

This sequence starts from those visual slogans. In every lesson, students say what an image "says", to whom, and in what tone, and they name the visual devices that make the sentence. They then ask two questions that do not have a single schoolbook answer. First: does it matter who the artist is in private life, or only what the work says in public? Second: when a painted slogan is on a wall, who should decide what happens to that public voice, the artist, the owner of the wall, the city, or the people who walk past?

> The big question of the sequence. When a painted slogan speaks on a wall, does the artist's private identity matter more than the work, and who should control that public voice?

This is an open question. You can argue that a mural already has a public author, the name Banksy, without a civil identity. You can argue that a wall belongs to its owner, or that a work made for the street should stay in the street. At the end of the sequence, you will defend your own answer, with evidence, and you will keep claims in their right category: fact, attributed claim, rumour, or interpretation.

> A necessary caution about identity. Banksy's civil identity is not a confirmed fact in this sequence. In July 2008, the Mail on Sunday put forward the name Robin Gunningham. On 13 March 2026, a Reuters investigation reported that Banksy was born Robin Gunningham and later used the name David Jones. Reuters presents this as the conclusion of its own enquiry, based on documents and interviews. Banksy did not confirm that identification in the sources examined for this sequence. Pest Control, the artist's official contact, told Reuters that the artist had decided not to comment. A lawyer, Mark Stephens, challenged the accuracy of many details without confirming or denying the proposed name. On 22 March 2026, NPR stated that it had not independently confirmed Reuters' findings. In class, we therefore say: According to Reuters, in March 2026, Banksy was born Robin Gunningham. We never say: Banksy's real name is Robin Gunningham.

Fiche d'identité

Title	Banksy: Who Owns an Anonymous Voice?
Class	Seconde bac pro, all streams (production and services). Première classes can follow the B1 pathway as the main track.
Level	A2 and B1 (CEFR), as two clear pathways in every lesson. Same supports, different expected language and length.
Programme	BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019, langues vivantes des classes préparant au CAP et au baccalauréat professionnel (arrêté du 3 avril 2019)
Length	Six lessons of 55 minutes, each planned over 52 minutes, with a checkpoint at minute 44 and an eight-minute essential closing route
Differentiation	Two pathways, A2 and B1, visible in every lesson. Students work on the same images and the same questions.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Final task	A cultural mediation team advises a local exhibition entitled Banksy: Public Walls, Private Names. Each student presents one work as a visual slogan, then recommends how to exhibit it without overstating evidence or erasing the street.

Programme, activités langagières and evaluation

Programme de langues vivantes des classes préparant au CAP et au baccalauréat professionnel (arrêté du 3 avril 2019, publié au BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019). Source: education.gouv.fr.

The programme does not use the numbered cultural axes of the lycée général et technologique. It organises teaching around two contexts of communication. This sequence works in both. The five objectives below are the programme themes that the sequence actually serves.

Context 1. Everyday, personal, social and civic life

Objective from the programme	Where in the sequence
1. Grandes œuvres célèbres (peinture, sculpture, cinéma, photographie)	Every lesson: describing and interpreting murals as visual slogans, a temporary park, a hotel and an auction film
2. Personnages historiques et personnalités célèbres	Lessons 1, 2 and 6: a public artistic name, without treating a civil identity as established
3. Médias, réseaux sociaux et internet: pratiques et enjeux	Lesson 2: Reuters reporting, an earlier press claim from 2008, a fact-check, and the ethics of publication
4. Grands enjeux contemporains, droits de l'homme et migrations	Lessons 4 and 5: public space, conflict, displacement, and who may see a work
5. Événements culturels, lieux symboliques et tourisme	Lessons 4 and 6: Dismaland, The Walled Off Hotel, and a mediation task for visitors

Context 2. Professional life

Professional skill named by the programme	Where in the sequence
Identifying different viewpoints and taking part in a debate	Lessons 2, 3 and 5: a newsroom, a rights dispute, a public-art committee
Providing explanations adapted to a client or a visitor	Lesson 6: acting as a cultural mediator, presenting a visual slogan to a visitor
Producing a short professional report and proposing solutions	Lesson 6: a written exhibition recommendation and an ethical label

The six activités langagières

The 2019 programme trains students in five activités langagières that are also the five equally weighted parts of the baccalauréat professionnel assessment (each counts for one fifth of the mark), and in médiation, which the programme takes from the CECRL Companion Volume. Médiation is taught and practised (reformulating a press claim, explaining a work to a visitor). It is not a sixth scored activity in the CCF.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Activité langagière	How the sequence practises it
Réception orale (compréhension de l'oral)	Short teacher-read or recorded documents (Pest Control, exhibition brief, film excerpts), with a compte rendu in French on the A2 pathway and a more complete compte rendu on the B1 pathway, in the spirit of Situation A
Réception écrite (compréhension de l'écrit)	Source cards, a court-case paraphrase, captions and short authentic-style documents; students identify essential information and, at B1, a point of view
Production orale en continu	Diagnostic speaking, mid-point oral (Lesson 3) and final presentation (Lesson 6), with length and frames differentiated for A2 and B1
Interaction orale	Paired interpretation, a newsroom, a committee, and the second half of the mid-point and final orals, in the spirit of Situation B
Production écrite	Observation cards, a corrected headline, a professional note, and the final ethical label (training for the written production of Situation A: a connected text in English)
Médiation	Reformulating a press claim without overstating it (Lesson 2); explaining a visual slogan and its place to a visitor who does not share the same knowledge (Lesson 6)

Descripteurs CECRL, A2 and B1

The descriptors below are those of the CECRL, which the 2019 programme uses as its reference. The A2 and B1 pathways in each lesson are built on these descriptors, not on a private scale.

Activité	A2	B1
Réception orale	Can understand phrases and frequent vocabulary on familiar topics, and the main point of short, clear, simple messages.	Can understand the main points of clear standard speech on familiar matters, including short accounts of events and opinions, when delivery is relatively slow and clear.
Réception écrite	Can understand short, simple texts on familiar topics and find specific information in simple material (captions, cards, short notices).	Can understand texts that consist mainly of frequent everyday or job-related language, including a short report and the description of an event or a viewpoint.
Production orale en continu	Can describe in simple terms what is in an image, and give a short, rehearsed presentation on a familiar subject, with frames if needed.	Can give a prepared, straightforward presentation, relate a clear narrative, and give reasons and explanations for opinions and recommendations.
Interaction orale	Can communicate in simple and routine exchanges, and ask and answer simple questions on familiar subjects.	Can enter a conversation on a familiar subject, express and respond to opinions, and briefly give reasons and explanations.
Production écrite	Can write a series of simple phrases and sentences linked with simple connectors (and, because, but), including a short message or card.	Can write straightforward connected text on a familiar subject, give reasons for an opinion, and write a short professional note or label.
Médiation	Can convey the main point of a short, simple spoken or written text on a familiar subject, in simple language.	Can convey information given in a clear text, and paraphrase a short passage so that another person can use it, without adding facts that are not in the source.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Evaluation logic: training for the CCF, not the examination itself

In the baccalauréat professionnel, the langue vivante is assessed, for candidates in établissements publics or privés sous contrat and for apprentices in habilitated CFA, by CCF (contrôle en cours de formation). Other candidates take a terminal examination. The level expected at the end of the cycle is B1+ for LVA and A2+ for LVB. The CCF takes place in the last year of the cycle. This sequence is for Seconde: it trains the activities and uses grids aligned with the official descriptors. It is not the CCF, and it does not claim to reproduce every examination condition.

Situation A (written, 1 hour): compréhension de l'oral (audio or video of one minute thirty at most, three listenings, compte rendu in French); compréhension de l'écrit (an unknown authentic document of fifteen lines at most, compte rendu in French); expression écrite (a choice of two subjects, in English, at least 100 to 120 words). Situation B (oral, 10 minutes): at most five minutes of presentation in continuous speech, on a piece of work, a project, a product, a service or a professional experience, then at most five minutes of interview. Each of the five activités langagières counts for one fifth of the mark.

The mid-point oral in Lesson 3 and the final oral in Lesson 6 train Situation B (continuous speaking then interaction) on a professional-style task: presenting a work and a recommendation, as a mediator would present a project or a service to a visitor. Length is shorter on the A2 pathway and closer to the examination timing on the B1 pathway. The final written label and recommendation train the expression écrite of Situation A. Listenings train compréhension de l'oral, and source texts train compréhension de l'écrit, as classroom practice, not as a full mock paper under exact timing. Grids name the official-style criteria: realisation of the task, organisation, lexical range and accuracy, linguistic accuracy, ease (for continuous speaking), and, for interaction, understanding the partner, reacting, and keeping the exchange going. After each oral, the student notes what was missed and produces an improved version.

The six lessons

Lesson	Question of the day	Activités langagières	Language focus
1. Can an image speak without a name?	Can a picture speak like a slogan, even before we know who made it?	Réception écrite (images and captions); production orale en continu; interaction orale; production écrite	there is / there are; present continuous; may; a lexical bank for visual slogans
2. Should the public know who Banksy is?	When does reporting an identity serve the public, and when does it intrude on a private life?	Réception écrite; médiation (accurate paraphrase of a claim); production écrite; interaction orale; production orale en continu	according to; reported that; may / might; did not confirm is not denied
3. If you own the wall, do you own the art?	Can someone own the object without owning every right connected to that public voice?	Réception écrite; réception orale (Pest Control); production orale en continu and interaction (mid-point oral, Situation B practice); production écrite	was painted / was removed / was returned; should; however
4. Can anti-commercial art escape the market?	When a slogan criticises money and then meets a shop or an auction, what happens to its voice?	Réception orale (film excerpts); réception écrite; production orale en continu; interaction (debate); production écrite; médiation	comparatives; more... than; whereas; although
5. Does a mural lose its voice when it leaves its wall?	If the place is part of the slogan, what remains when the image moves?	Réception écrite and visuelle; médiation (explain what the place adds); production orale; interaction (committee); production écrite	if + present, will / may; because of; in order to

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Lesson	Question of the day	Activités langagières	Language focus
6. Exhibiting Banksy without owning the name	How can a mediator present a visual slogan without overstating evidence or erasing the street?	Médiation (central professional task); production écrite (label, Situation A practice); production orale en continu and interaction (Situation B practice); réception of the brief	review: should, may, although, if, accurate attribution

Final task

Banksy: Public Walls, Private Names. Your class is a cultural mediation team. The organisers want to exhibit photographs of murals and to discuss a fictional proposal: should a mural be removed from a privately owned building and shown indoors? Each student presents one artwork first as a visual slogan (what it says, to whom, in what tone, and with which devices), explains why its location is part of that sentence, distinguishes a documented event from an identity claim, recommends what should happen to the fictional mural, answers a visitor's question, and writes a short ethical exhibition label. Nobody is asked to discover a private address, to identify relatives, or to investigate a private person.

Assessments

Assessment calendar

Assessment	When	What, and which CCF activity it trains	Weight
Diagnostic	Lesson 1, first 12 minutes	Observe a mural as a visual slogan, speak and write without researching the artist. Production orale and écrite. Not a CCF simulation.	Not marked: used to place students on the A2 or B1 pathway
Mid-point oral	Lesson 3, minutes 28 to 44	Paired speaking on ownership: continuous speech then a partner's objection (Situation B practice). Grids aligned with official descriptors, A2 and B1, then self-correction.	/20, coefficient 1
Summative	Lesson 6	Final oral (continuous speaking and interaction, Situation B practice) and a written label and recommendation (expression écrite, Situation A practice), with A2 and B1 grids aligned with official descriptors.	/20, coefficient 2

Every grid includes a language criterion: vocabulary from the sequence, and accurate syntax. After oral work, each student notes what was missed, using the teacher's grid, and produces an improved version.

Downloads

Student pack, teacher's guide and dys version, each in pdf, docx and odt.

- Student pack

  pdf docx odt
- Teacher's guide

  pdf docx odt
- Dys version

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

pdf docx odt

On the site: dys version · teacher's guide · sources.

Photographs used in the sequence

The images are photographs from Wikimedia Commons, downloaded for this page, with the photographer and the licence in each caption. No photograph is used twice on the site. A Creative Commons or public-domain licence for a photograph does not remove rights in the artwork that was photographed. Pest Control is Banksy's official contact and the body that issues certificates of authenticity for eligible works. It does not, according to its own FAQ, certify illegally executed works, and it does not treat the removal of a street mural as a normal way to obtain a certificate.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Lesson 1. Can an image speak without a name?

Question of the day: Can a picture speak like a slogan, even before we know who made it?

Activités langagières · BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019

- Réception écrite. Reading captions and the image itself as a text: students extract what is visible and what is only suggested
- Production orale en continu. A short presentation of a work as a visual slogan, with frames on the A2 pathway
- Interaction orale. A partner asks a question or offers a second reading; simple exchange at A2, a short reasoned exchange at B1
- Production écrite. An observation card and a written record of the slogan (what it says, to whom, in what tone)

Descripteurs CECRL visés dans cette lesson.

A2

Can describe what is in an image in simple terms, and write a short slogan sentence with a reason, using there is, the present continuous and may.

B1

Can distinguish description from interpretation, compare two readings, and explain how placement or tone helps the image speak, with reasons.

A2 outcome

Describe visible details, write a simple slogan sentence, and give a tone with a reason.

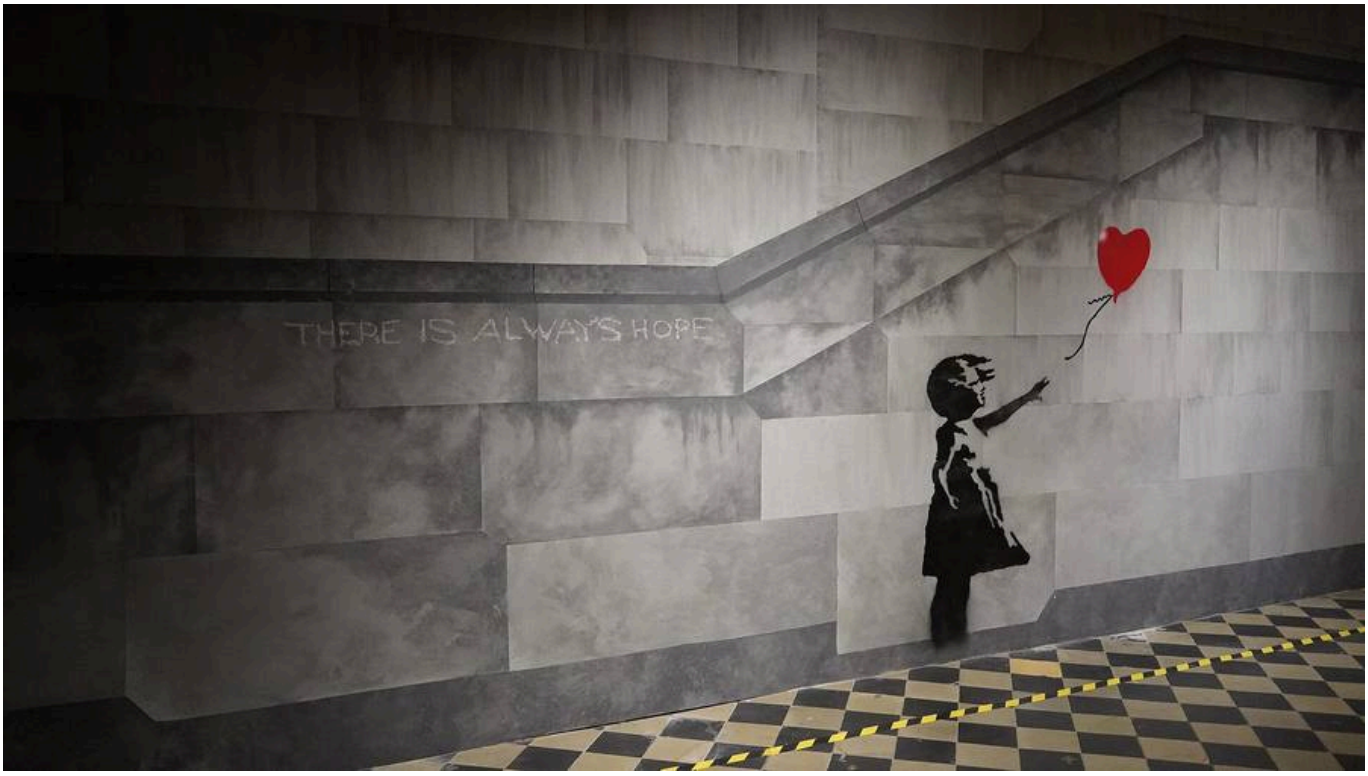

B1 outcome

Distinguish description from interpretation, explain how a visual device makes the sentence, and compare two plausible readings.

Step 1 and 2. Diagnostic assessment

Banksy uses a language of his own: slogans, but in the form of drawings. Look at the image in silence. Do not search for the artist's name yet. The photograph shows the famous motif of Girl with Balloon. The original mural appeared in London in 2002. The photograph below is a reconstructed mural in an exhibition in Brussels, not the original wall. We can still study what the image says.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

The motif of Banksy's Girl with Balloon (the original mural appeared in London in 2002). This photograph shows a reconstructed mural in the exhibition The World of Banksy, Brussels, 2022, not the original wall in London. Photograph by Miguel Discart, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

A visual slogan: four questions

Every work in this sequence is read as a speech act, a slogan in the form of a picture. For each image, answer:

1. What does it say? Write one sentence, as if it were a slogan.
2. To whom? Who is the image speaking to?
3. In what tone? Ironic, angry, playful, bitter, hopeful, warning, mocking, or another tone you can justify.
4. How does it speak? Name the visual devices: stencil, written words, official look, placement, contrast, a real object next to the painting, a contradiction between the words and the place.

Student sheet

Task A. Observe. Write: 1. Three things you can actually see. 2. One sentence, as if it were a slogan: what does the image "say"? 3. To whom, and in what tone? 4. One question about the image.

A2 pathway

Task B. Speak for 30 seconds. Use: There is... The girl is... The image says... The tone is... because...

Task C. Write three connected sentences, including your slogan sentence.

B1 pathway

Task B. Speak for 60 seconds. Include visible evidence, your slogan sentence, two possible tones or readings, and one question the image cannot answer. Then ask your partner one question.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Task C. Write five or six sentences, keeping description and interpretation apart, and naming one visual device (the stencil, the empty wall, the red balloon).

The teacher uses this first speaking turn to place students on the A2 or the B1 pathway. It is not marked. It is a first observation of production orale en continu, interaction and production écrite, not a CCF simulation.

Teacher's positioning grid (not marked)

Criterion (aligned with official descriptors)	Towards A2	Towards B1
Réalisation de la tâche	Lists objects, offers a short slogan, sometimes mixes facts and opinions	Separates what is visible from what is guessed, and produces a clear slogan sentence with a tone
Production orale en continu / interaction	Short sentences, with support from the frames; answers a simple question	Connected speech, a reason, a second possibility, and a relevant question to the partner
Correction and lexical range	there is, present continuous, a simple because	may, a word for tone (ironic, hopeful, warning), a question the image cannot answer

Step 3. The question of the day

A mural on a wall often has no civil name next to it. Some works carry a painted tag; others are attributed later. The public still meets an author of a kind: a style, a stencil, a repeated motif, a sentence on a wall. The question is not "is there no author at all?" The question is: can the image already speak, like a slogan, before a private identity is known?

Step 4. Building your vocabulary

A. A lexical bank for visual slogans

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
a visual slogan	a message spoken by a picture, with or without written words	This mural is a visual slogan about surveillance.
a message / a statement	what the image is trying to say	The message may be a warning.
to make a statement	to say something clearly, in public	The wall makes a statement about climate change.
to denounce	to say publicly that something is wrong	The image denounces the rise of the water.
to mock / to criticise	to make fun of something, or to say that it is wrong	The words mock official advertising.
irony / ironic	when the picture says the opposite of what it seems to say, on purpose	The tone is ironic: the words deny what the water shows.
tone	the way the message sounds: angry, playful, bitter, hopeful, warning	The tone is playful, but the target is serious.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
the target / the audience	the person or group the slogan is speaking to	The audience may be passers-by, or a camera.
placement	where the work is put; the place can be part of the sentence	The placement in the canal is part of the slogan.

B. Words for looking at a mural

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
mural	a painting made directly on a wall	The mural is on the side of a building.
stencil	a cut-out shape used to paint a repeated image	The girl is painted with a stencil.
foreground	the part of the image that appears closest to us	In the foreground, the girl is reaching out.
background	the part that appears further away	In the background, the wall is almost empty.
anonymous	with a name that is not publicly known	The artist is anonymous as a private person.
public space	a place that people can enter or see in ordinary life	The original mural was in a public space.
description	saying what you can actually see	A description stays with visible evidence.
interpretation	a possible meaning, not a proof	My interpretation is that the balloon is being lost.
evidence	what you can point to in the image or in a source	The evidence is the girl's raised hand.
I would argue that	a phrase to introduce a reasoned opinion	I would argue that the image already speaks.

Exercises on vocabulary

Exercise 1. Match. 1. visual slogan 2. to denounce 3. irony 4. tone 5. placement

a. the way the message sounds b. a message spoken by a picture c. saying the opposite on purpose d. to say publicly that something is wrong e. where the work is put, as part of the sentence

Exercise 2. Description or interpretation? Write D or I.

1. The balloon is red and heart-shaped.
2. The girl is sad because she has lost her balloon.
3. The girl is reaching towards the balloon with her left hand.
4. The image is a slogan about lost hope.
5. The wall behind the figure is almost empty.

Exercise 3. Fill in the gaps with: slogan · ironic · placement · may · evidence

We can write a visual _____ for this mural, but we must keep _____ and interpretation apart. The empty wall _____ suggest loneliness: that is a possible reading, not a proof. If a sentence is painted so that water covers it, the _____ is part of the message, and the tone may be _____.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Flashcards of the lesson

Each student makes three cards: one word from the slogan bank, one word for arguing, one grammar structure. On the front: the word or structure. On the back: a short meaning, and one example sentence about today's mural. Model:

Front	Back
visual slogan	A message spoken by a picture. Example: This mural is a visual slogan about hope and loss.
may + verb	A possibility, not a certainty. Example: The girl may be letting the balloon go.
ironic	When the picture says the opposite of what it seems to say. Example: The tone may be ironic.

Keep the cards for the next lessons. You will reuse them.

Step 5. Three more walls, and a grammar point

Now look at works that were (or are) on real street walls. Some use written words. Some use a real object as the other speaker. In each case, the place is part of the sentence. Answer the four slogan questions for each photograph.

A written slogan next to a real camera

What are you looking at?, in a subway near Hyde Park, faces a real surveillance camera. The words address someone: the camera, or the passer-by, or both.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A stencil widely attributed to Banksy in a subway near Hyde Park, London: the words WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING AT?, painted on the wall facing a real surveillance camera. Photograph by Andrew Dunn, April 2006, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

A2 pathway

Complete: There is a camera. The words say... The image is speaking to... The tone is... because...

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

B1 pathway

Write four short sentences: the slogan, the addressee, the tone, and the device (the real camera is part of the sentence). Then say whether the question is angry, playful, or both.

A written slogan that the water completes

On the Regent's Canal in Camden, the words I DON'T BELIEVE IN GLOBAL WARMING are painted so that the lower line sits in the water. The canal becomes part of the sentence.

A mural widely attributed to Banksy on the Regent's Canal in Camden, London: the words I DON'T BELIEVE IN GLOBAL WARMING, painted so that the lower line sits in the water. Photograph by Matt Brown, 21 December 2009, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

A2 pathway

Complete: The words say... The water is... The tone is ironic because... The image denounces...

B1 pathway

Explain, in six to eight lines, how placement turns a written sentence into an ironic slogan. Who is the target?

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

What would change if the same words were painted high and dry on a different wall?

A slogan that looks official, and a slogan without words

One Nation Under CCTV, on Newman Street in London: a child is painting huge letters. A uniformed figure and a dog seem to watch. A camera is part of the scene. Then look at The Mild Mild West in Stokes Croft, Bristol, a picture that can speak without writing a sentence, and at a Bristol stencil that is a sentence about permission: You don't need planning permission to build castles in the sky.

A mural attributed to Banksy, One Nation Under CCTV, Newman Street, London. A child on a ladder paints large white letters on a wall, while a uniformed figure and a dog look on. Photograph by VirtuallyLondonBecky, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A mural attributed to Banksy, The Mild Mild West, Stokes Croft, Bristol: a teddy bear throws a molotov cocktail towards three riot police. Photograph by Earthkingfather, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

A stencil attributed to Banksy in Bristol: You don't need planning permission to build castles in the sky. Photograph by Earthkingfather, 20 March 2026, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0, showing the work as it stood in 2026. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Grammar of the lesson

- there is / there are for what exists in the picture: There is a child on a ladder. There are large white letters.
- present continuous for a visible action now: The child is painting. The figure is watching.
- may for a possible reading: The child may be criticising surveillance. We do not know the painter's exact intention from the image alone.

Exercise 4. Choose the correct form.

1. There is / There are a dog in the picture.
2. The child is paint / is painting the last letter.
3. The letters may / are meaning "the nation is watched". (Careful: may is followed by the infinitive without to.)
4. There is / There are large letters on the wall.
5. The uniformed figure may watch / may be watching the child.

Exercise 5. Write the slogan. For One Nation Under CCTV, for The Mild Mild West, and for the Bristol stencil, write: one slogan sentence, the audience, the tone, and one visual device. A2: short sentences with the frames. B1: a short paragraph for each, keeping description and interpretation apart.

Step 6. Speaking task

A2 pathway

In pairs, present one of today's murals in 30 to 40 seconds, as a visual slogan. Use at least two of these frames: There is... The image says... The tone is... It may... Your partner then asks you one simple question.

B1 pathway

In pairs, compare two murals in about one minute. For each, give the slogan, the audience and the tone. Use may, whereas and I would argue that. End with a question the photographs cannot answer: for example, who owns the wall, or what the artist intended as a private person.

Step 7. Written record

A2 pathway

Copy and complete: There is... The image says... The tone is... I think this picture can / cannot speak without a name because...

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

B1 pathway

Write six to eight sentences. First describe. Then give your slogan sentence, the audience and the tone, and one visual device. Then answer the question of the day, with a reason, without inventing a civil identity for the artist.

Step 8. Homework

Complete an observation card for Well Hung Lover, at the bottom of Park Street, Bristol (photograph below). Treat it as a visual slogan: what you can see, the slogan sentence you would write under it, the audience, the tone, one visual device, and one thing you cannot establish from the image alone. A2: six short sentences, using there is and may. B1: a short paragraph that keeps description and interpretation apart. Bring your card to Lesson 2. Do not search for a private name.

A mural attributed to Banksy, often called Well Hung Lover or The Naked Man, at the bottom of Park Street, Bristol. A naked man hangs from a window while a jealous husband and a woman look out. Photograph by Adrian Pingstone (public domain), Wikimedia Commons. The photograph is in the public domain. The artwork itself remains protected. The city council chose not to remove it.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Lesson 2. Should the public know who Banksy is?

Question of the day: When does reporting an identity serve the public, and when does it intrude on a private life?

Activités langagières · BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019

- Réception écrite. Source cards: a Reuters investigation, an earlier press claim, a fact-check, and a caution from NPR
- Médiation. Paraphrasing a press claim so that it stays a claim: students convey the information without adding a confirmation the source does not give
- Production écrite. Corrected headlines and a short news brief, training for expression écrite
- Interaction orale. A newsroom role-play: reporter and editor, or reporter, editor and lawyer
- Production orale en continu. A short oral verdict on the ethics of publication

Descripteurs CECRL visés dans cette lesson.

A2

Can identify the source of a short written text, and convey its main point in simple language, with according to.

B1

Can understand a short report, paraphrase it accurately, evaluate how strong a claim is, and defend a position on publication, with reasons.

A2 outcome

Identify the source of a statement and distinguish a press report from a personal confirmation.

B1 outcome

Evaluate evidence, keep attribution accurate, and defend a position on the ethics of publication.

Step 1. Retrieval

In pairs, use yesterday's cards. One student says a word or a structure; the other gives the example sentence. Then swap. Recycle one slogan sentence from Lesson 1: what did one mural "say", to whom, and in what tone?

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Step 1b. The public name, without a civil face

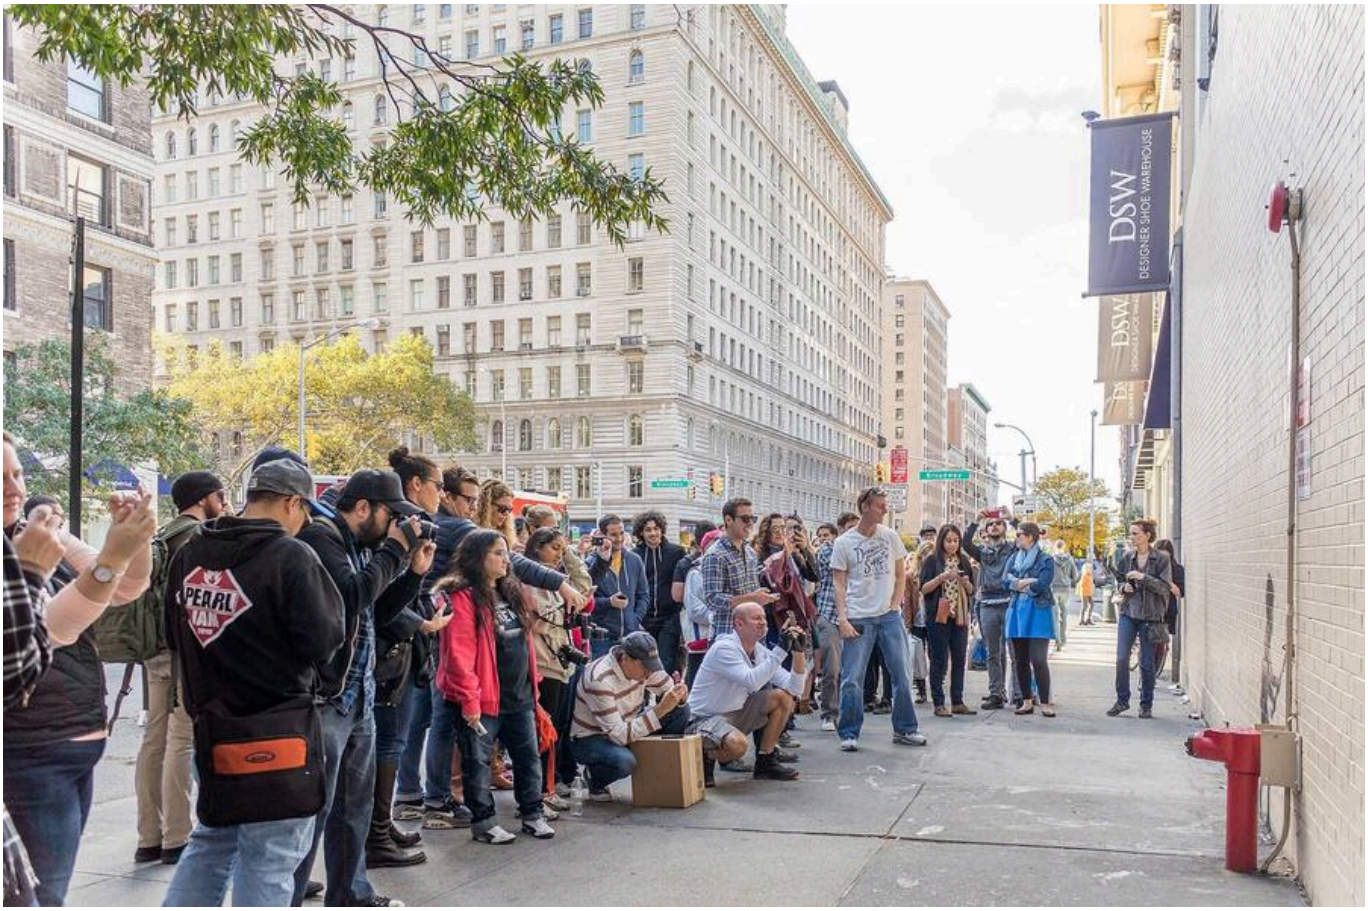

Before we read the press cards, look at how the public already meets the name Banksy. In these photographs, the artist is not present as a private person. The public follows a word on the ground, gathers in front of a wall, or reads a sentence about artists who "steal". The public name is itself a kind of slogan. It is not a confirmed civil identity.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A painted arrow and the name BANKSY on a path leading visitors towards Dismaland, Weston-super-Mare, in 2015. The public name itself becomes a sign: people follow the word, not a face. Photograph by Neil Owen, Geograph, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A crowd gathered in front of a mural widely attributed to Banksy, Hammer Boy, on the Upper West Side of New York, during the artist's 2013 residency Better Out Than In. The artist is not in the photograph: the public meets the work, not a civil face. Photograph by Charley Lhasa, October 2013, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

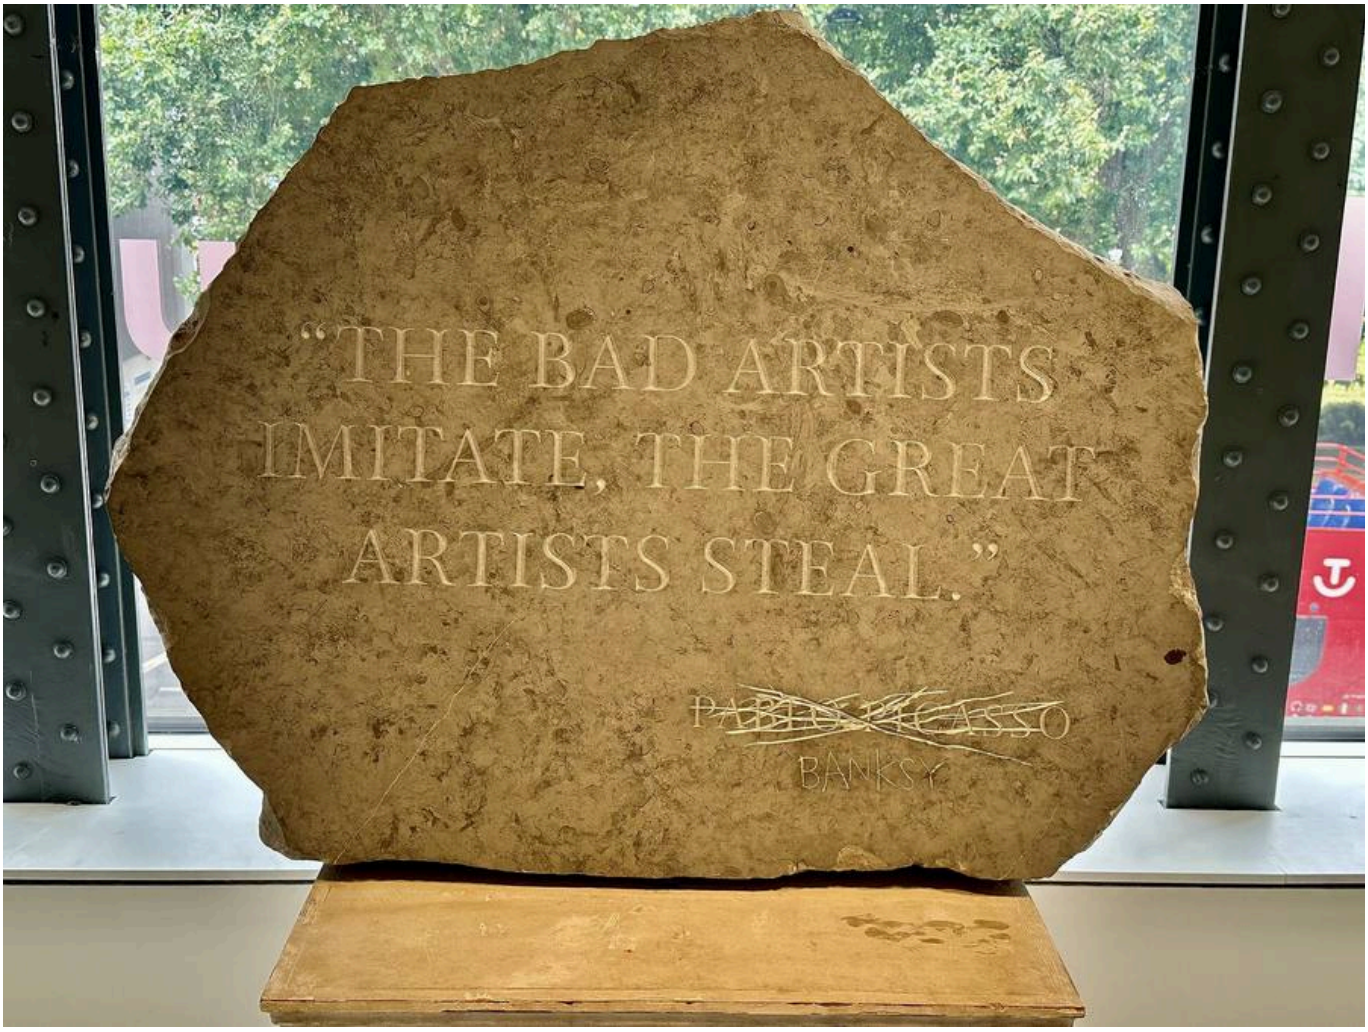

A rat stencil widely attributed to Banksy, on Brady Street, Bethnal Green, London. Photograph by Maggie Jones, 12 January 2008, Wikimedia Commons, public domain as a photograph. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A mural widely attributed to Banksy, Origami Crane, painted in May 2012 on a wall beside the River Lym in Lyme Regis. Photograph by Kenlar88, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A carved stone exhibited at the Moco Museum, London, photographed by Matt Brown on 14 August 2024. The sentence reads: THE BAD ARTISTS IMITATE, THE GREAT ARTISTS STEAL. The name Pablo Picasso is crossed out, and the name Banksy is carved below. The saying is often attributed to Picasso; the display puts Banksy's name in its place. Wikimedia Commons, CC BY 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected. A museum display is not a certificate from Pest Control.

A visual slogan: four questions

Every work in this sequence is read as a speech act, a slogan in the form of a picture. For each image, answer:

1. What does it say? Write one sentence, as if it were a slogan.
2. To whom? Who is the image speaking to?
3. In what tone? Ironic, angry, playful, bitter, hopeful, warning, mocking, or another tone you can justify.
4. How does it speak? Name the visual devices: stencil, written words, official look, placement, contrast, a real object next to the painting, a contradiction between the words and the place.

Exercise A. The name as a visual slogan. For the path that says BANKSY, and for the carved stone at the Moco Museum, answer the four slogan questions. Then answer this: is "Banksy" already an author the public can meet, without a private name?

A2 pathway

Complete: The path says... People are... The stone says... The name Picasso is... I think the public name is / is not enough, because...

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

B1 pathway

Write a short paragraph (eight to ten lines). Compare the crowd in front of Hammer Boy (the public meets the work, not a face) with the Moco stone (a famous saying, a crossed-out name, and the name Banksy carved below). What does each image say about authorship? Keep a museum display in the category of a display, not a certificate from Pest Control.

Step 2. Source cards

These cards are educational paraphrases, not copied articles. They exist so that you can practise a distinction. Read them carefully. Then, for each card, write: is this a documented fact, an attributed claim, a rumour, or an interpretation?

Card A. Reuters, 13 March 2026

Reuters published an investigation by Simon Gardner, James Pearson and Blake Morrison. The investigation reports that Banksy was born Robin Gunningham and later used the name David Jones. Reuters presents this as the conclusion of its own enquiry, and says it used police and court documents, interviews and travel information. Reuters is a named source, making a strong claim. It is not the same thing as a confirmation by the artist.

Source: reuters.com/investigates/special-report/global-art-banksy/, filed 13 March 2026, 10 a.m. GMT.

Card B. What Banksy and those around the artist said, as reported by Reuters

According to Reuters, Pest Control, the artist's official contact, said the artist had decided not to comment. A lawyer, Mark Stephens, challenged the accuracy of many details. He did not, in the reporting consulted for this sequence, confirm or deny the proposed identity. An absence of confirmation is not a denial. A challenge to details is not a confirmation either.

Card C. NPR, 22 March 2026

NPR interviewed Simon Gardner about the investigation. The presenter stated clearly that NPR had not independently confirmed Reuters' findings. This is useful: a second organisation can report that a first organisation has made a claim, without adopting the claim as its own established fact.

Source: NPR, 22 March 2026.

Card D. The Mail on Sunday, July 2008

Eighteen years earlier, the Mail on Sunday had already put forward the name Robin Gunningham, after what it described as a long investigation. The paper itself hedged: it presented a photograph of a man "believed to be Banksy". Banksy did not confirm the identification. In class, this is an earlier attributed claim, not a proof that Reuters must be right, and not a proof that Reuters must be wrong.

Card E. A genuine case of misidentification, 19 March 2026

After the Reuters investigation, some outlets and social-media posts circulated photographs of a London resident, George Georgiou, as if he were Banksy. Reuters published a fact-check: those photographs were not of the person Reuters had written about, and Georgiou is not Robin Gunningham. This shows how a story about identity can create a new error. We do not reproduce that person's photograph in this sequence.

Source: Reuters Fact Check, 19 March 2026.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Step 3. Four useful categories

Category	Working meaning	Example from this lesson
Documented fact	An event or a publication supported by the source under examination	Reuters published its investigation on 13 March 2026.
Attributed claim	A conclusion clearly assigned to a named source	According to Reuters, Banksy was born Robin Gunningham.
Rumour	An allegation circulating without adequate supporting evidence in the material available	An unnamed account on social media says a local stranger is Banksy.
Interpretation or opinion	A judgement about meaning, value, or what should happen	Banksy's anonymity makes the work more powerful.

A claim can be well supported. Calling something a claim does not mean it is false. Reuters presents documentary evidence; students may discuss how strong that evidence seems, without turning the name into a classroom fact, and without flattening a documented investigation into "just a rumour".

Exercise 1. Sort these statements. Write F (documented fact), C (attributed claim), R (rumour) or I (interpretation).

1. Reuters published an investigation on 13 March 2026.
2. Banksy's real name is Robin Gunningham.
3. According to Reuters, Banksy later used the name David Jones.
4. NPR said it had not independently confirmed the findings.
5. Anonymity is the only reason Banksy is famous.
6. A classmate heard that a teacher in Bristol is Banksy, but has no source.
7. The Mail on Sunday put the name Gunningham forward in 2008.
8. Pest Control confirmed the Reuters identification. (Careful.)

Step 4. Expanding your vocabulary

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
according to	used to show the source of a piece of information	According to Reuters, the artist later used another name.
to report that	to give information as news, as a journalist does	Reuters reported that it had examined court documents.
to confirm	to say officially that something is true	Banksy did not confirm the identification.
to deny	to say that something is not true	A refusal to comment is not a denial.
to allege	to say that something is true, without proving it	The paper alleged that it had identified the artist.
investigation	a careful enquiry that looks for evidence	The investigation was published in March 2026.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
privacy	the right to keep some parts of life out of public view	Some people argue that a private name should stay private.
public interest	a reason for publishing something because society may need to know it	The newsroom must decide whether publication is in the public interest.
to attribute	to assign a statement or a work to a source or a person	We attribute the claim to Reuters, not to Banksy.
to qualify (a claim)	to limit a statement so that it stays accurate	You can qualify a headline by adding according to.

Grammar of the lesson

- according to + source: According to Reuters, the artist was born Robin Gunningham.
- X reported that + clause: Reuters reported that it had used court documents.
- may / might for a possibility we do not treat as certain: The documents may support the claim. They might still be incomplete.
- A useful contrast: did not confirm is not the same as denied. The artist did not confirm the name. The artist did not deny it either, in the sources we have.

Exercise 2. Correct the headlines. Each headline is too sure of itself. Rewrite it so that it is accurate.

1. BANKSY'S REAL NAME REVEALED: ROBIN GUNNINGHAM.
2. PEST CONTROL CONFIRMS THE STORY.
3. NPR PROVES REUTERS RIGHT.
4. BANKSY DENIES EVERYTHING.

Exercise 3. Complete with according to, reported that, may, did not confirm, or denied.

1. _____ Reuters, the artist later used the name David Jones.
2. The Mail on Sunday _____ a man in its photographs was "believed to be Banksy".
3. NPR _____ it had not independently confirmed the findings.
4. Banksy _____ the identification in the sources we have.
5. A well-supported claim _____ still be debated. It is not automatically a classroom fact.

Step 5. Newsroom role-play (interaction, and médiation of a claim)

You work on the news desk of a school magazine. A major agency has just published an investigation into Banksy's civil identity. You must decide what to print, and how to print it. You are not asked to find a private address or to contact a private person.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A2 pathway

In pairs: one student is a reporter, the other is the editor. The reporter has 40 seconds to say what the agency reported, using according to. The editor has 40 seconds to decide: print the name with a cautious headline, print the story without the civil name, or wait. Use I think we should... because...

B1 pathway

In groups of three: reporter, editor, and a lawyer for the magazine. In three minutes, reach a decision. You must: attribute the claim; mention that Banksy did not confirm it; mention NPR's caution; and answer this objection: 'The public has a right to know everything about a famous person.' Use although, may and public interest.

Step 6. Oral verdict

A2 pathway

Give a 20-second answer to the question of the day. Frame: I think the public should / should not know, because... According to... Banksy did not confirm...

B1 pathway

Give a 45-second answer. Include one argument for publication, one argument for privacy, and your own qualified decision. Do not present the civil name as a fact.

Step 7. Written record and flashcards

Write the accurate classroom sentence in your exercise book:

> Reuters reported in March 2026 that Banksy was born Robin Gunningham and later took the name David Jones. Banksy did not confirm that identification in the sources examined for this sequence.

Then write two flashcards: according to and did not confirm. Homework will reuse them.

A2 pathway

Copy the classroom sentence. Then rewrite headline 1 from exercise 2 in your own words.

B1 pathway

Copy the classroom sentence. Then write a six-sentence news brief for the school magazine, with accurate attribution and a final ethical judgement.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Step 8. Homework

A2: record yourself (on a school-approved device, or read aloud at home) reading your corrected headline and one reason, in about 20 seconds. B1: write a short comment (80 to 100 words) on this statement: "If you choose to be famous, you lose the right to privacy." Use according to, although and may. Do not try to discover a private address.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Lesson 3. If you own the wall, do you own the art?

Question of the day: Can someone own the object without owning every right connected to that public voice?

Activités langagières · BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019

- Réception écrite. An educational paraphrase of a High Court case, and captions of murals read as visual slogans
- Réception orale. A short teacher-read text about Pest Control, with a compte rendu, training for compréhension de l'oral
- Production orale en continu and interaction orale. Mid-point oral assessment: continuous speech then a partner's objection, Situation B practice, not the CCF itself
- Production écrite. A short professional note to a café owner, training for expression écrite

Descripteurs CECRL visés dans cette lesson.

A2

Can explain, in simple terms, the difference between a wall, an image and public access, and give a short recommendation with should.

B1

Can apply a documented case without inventing a universal rule, give reasons, and respond to a partner's objection.

A2 outcome

Explain, in simple terms, the difference between a wall, an image and public access.

B1 outcome

Apply these distinctions to a real dispute, without inventing a universal legal rule.

Step 1. Retrieval

Without looking at your notes: who published an identity claim in March 2026? Did Banksy confirm it? How do we say that in one accurate sentence?

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Step 2. The Art Buff case (Folkestone, 2014 to 2015)

We do not have a clear open-licence photograph of this mural for the page, so we work from a short educational paraphrase of a court case. The case is useful because it is documented, and because it is limited: it answers one question, not every question.

> In September 2014, a mural known as Art Buff appeared on a building in Folkestone. It showed a woman wearing headphones, facing an empty plinth. The business using the building was a tenant, not the freehold owner of the wall. The tenant arranged for a section of wall to be cut out and removed, without the landlord's permission. The landlord later transferred its title and its legal claim to a charity, the Creative Foundation. On 11 September 2015, the High Court decided that the Foundation was entitled to the return of the removed section of wall. The dispute was about the physical object. It did not decide that the public owns every Banksy, and it did not decide that buying a wall automatically buys the copyright in the image.

Source: The Creative Foundation v Dreamland Leisure Ltd, High Court, 11 September 2015.

Exercise 1. Put the events in order.

a. The High Court orders the return of the section of wall. b. A mural appears on a building in Folkestone. c. The landlord's claim is transferred to the Creative Foundation. d. The tenant has the wall cut out, without permission.

Exercise 2. True, false, or we cannot say from this case?

1. The tenant owned the freehold of the building.
2. The court decided that every Banksy mural belongs to the public.
3. The dispute was about a physical section of wall.
4. The court decided that the charity now owns the copyright in the image.
5. The mural was removed without the landlord's permission.

Step 3. Three different questions about ownership

For classroom purposes, keep these three questions apart:

Question	What it is about	A first example
Physical ownership	Who owns the wall, or the piece of wall that has been cut out?	In the Art Buff case, the court treated the removed section as part of the landlord's property.
Copyright	Who has rights in the artistic image, and who may reproduce it?	A Creative Commons licence for a photograph does not automatically cancel rights in the artwork.
Public access	Who can still encounter the work, in the street or elsewhere?	If a mural is removed and sold, passers-by may lose it, even if someone now "owns" the object.

Look at two photographs that show these questions in a different way. The first shows No Ball Games on a wall in Tottenham, in 2009. The mural was later removed and sold in sections. The second shows Season's Greetings, first painted on a garage in Port Talbot in 2018, and later displayed behind glass, away from its original wall.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A mural attributed to Banksy, No Ball Games, Tottenham, London, 2009. Two children throw a red sign that reads No Ball Games, instead of a ball. Photograph by GualdimG, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected. The mural was later removed from its wall and sold in sections.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A mural attributed to Banksy, Season's Greetings, first painted on a garage in Port Talbot, Wales, in 2018. This photograph shows the work on display behind glass, no longer on its original wall. Photograph by Sionk, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

A visual slogan: four questions

Every work in this sequence is read as a speech act, a slogan in the form of a picture. For each image, answer:

1. What does it say? Write one sentence, as if it were a slogan.
2. To whom? Who is the image speaking to?
3. In what tone? Ironic, angry, playful, bitter, hopeful, warning, mocking, or another tone you can justify.
4. How does it speak? Name the visual devices: stencil, written words, official look, placement, contrast, a real object next to the painting, a contradiction between the words and the place.

Read them as visual slogans. No Ball Games turns an official prohibition into a scene of play: children use a "no ball games" sign as part of the game. Season's Greetings looks like a Christmas picture; the place, a steel town, may change the tone. For each image, write the slogan sentence, the audience, the tone, and one visual device.

A2 pathway

Complete, for each mural: The image says... It is speaking to... The tone is... because...

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

B1 pathway

Write a short paragraph for each work. How does the official look, or the place, help the picture speak? What happens to that sentence if the mural is removed and sold, or placed behind glass?

A third photograph shows what "removing a mural" can look like. In May 2023, the section of wall that carried the Irpin gymnast was cut out. The figure left the building. The mural was later moved to another site on the same street. Protection and loss can be close to each other.

The Irpin mural of the gymnast with a ribbon after the section of wall was cut out, 14 May 2023. The figure has left the building. Photograph by Rasal Hague, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected. The mural was later moved to another site on the same street.

Step 4. Expanding your vocabulary

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
landlord	the owner of a building, who may rent it to a tenant	The landlord had not given permission.
tenant	the person or business that rents a building	The tenant had the wall cut out.
to remove	to take something away from its place	The mural was removed from the wall.
to return	to give something back	The court ordered the return of the wall section.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
copyright	the legal rights in an original artistic work	Owning a wall is not the same as owning the copyright.
to authenticate	to confirm that a work is by a particular artist	Pest Control authenticates eligible works.
certificate	an official document that states something is genuine	A certificate is not a permission to cut out a street mural.
public access	the possibility for people to see a work in ordinary life	Removal can reduce public access.
however	used to introduce a contrast	The charity obtained the wall. However, that did not settle copyright.

Grammar of the lesson

The past simple passive is useful for events when the object is more important than the person: The mural was painted in 2014. It was removed without permission. It was returned after a court decision. Form: was / were + past participle.

To give a recommendation: It should stay on the wall. It should not be sold without a public debate.

Exercise 3. Rewrite in the passive.

1. Someone painted the mural on a garage in Port Talbot.
2. Someone later displayed the work behind glass.
3. Someone cut the Irpin gymnast out of the building.
4. The High Court ordered the return of the Folkestone wall.
5. People sold No Ball Games in sections. (Use was sold.)

Exercise 4. Wall, image, or access? For each sentence, say which question is at stake.

1. Passers-by can no longer see the mural on their way to work.
2. A collector buys the cut-out section of brick.
3. A website reproduces the image without permission.
4. The landlord wants the piece of wall back.

Pest Control, a short teacher-written listening

The teacher reads the following text twice, at a measured pace. Students are told that this is an educational text based on Pest Control's published position, not a quotation. They take notes, then reconstruct.

> Pest Control presents itself as Banksy's official contact, and as the source of certificates of authenticity for eligible works. Its public FAQ distinguishes works that can receive a certificate from items it will not certify. It states that it does not issue certificates for illegally executed works. Reporting about the organisation also explains a policy against authenticating street pieces that have been removed from their intended locations. A > certificate and an official photograph of a mural in the street are not the same thing. Authentication is not a permission to take a wall down.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A2 pathway

Listen and complete: Pest Control is Banksy's official _____. It can issue a _____ of authenticity for some works. It does not certify illegally executed works. Authentication is not a _____ to remove a mural.

B1 pathway

Listen and write four notes: what Pest Control is; what a certificate does; what it does not certify; why this matters for a removed mural. Then tell your partner, using the passive at least once.

Step 5. Mid-point oral assessment

In pairs, you have three minutes. A fictional local café has a mural attributed to Banksy on its side wall. The owner wants to cut it out and sell it. A residents' association wants it to stay. You take sides, then you try to agree on a recommendation. You will be recorded on a school-approved device, or assessed live if recording is not possible. After the assessment, you use the grid to note what you missed, and you write an improved sentence.

A2 pathway

A2, about 45 seconds each, then one minute of interaction. Say: what the owner wants; what the residents want; the difference between the wall and the image; your recommendation, with should and because.

B1 pathway

B1, about one minute each, then one minute of interaction. Use the three-rights distinction, mention the Art Buff case without treating it as a universal rule, mention Pest Control, and answer your partner's objection. Use however, was removed and should.

A2 oral grid (mid-point) /20

Criterion	0 to 2	3 to 4	5
Task: positions and a recommendation	The task is incomplete	Positions are stated, with a simple recommendation	Clear positions, a recommendation and a reason
Ownership distinction	Wall, image and access are mixed	At least two of the three questions are kept apart	The three questions are used simply and correctly
Correction and lexical range	Little language from the sequence	should, because, some passive attempts	Vocabulary reused; was painted / was removed used intelligibly
Interaction (comprendre, réagir, maintenir l'échange)	Little response to the partner	A question or a short reaction	A real exchange, with a joint or reasoned conclusion

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

B1 oral grid (mid-point) /20

Criterion	0 to 2	3 to 4	5
Réalisation de la tâche (task and argument)	The task is incomplete	A position is defended, with one limitation	A clear recommendation, an opposing view, a reasoned conclusion
Use of the case and of Pest Control	No source, or a universal rule invented	The case or Pest Control is mentioned, with some accuracy	The case is used as a particular example, not as a general law
Correction and lexical range	Limited control	Passive forms and however attempted	Accurate attribution, passive forms, however, sequence vocabulary
Interaction (comprendre, réagir, maintenir l'échange)	Little response	A relevant reaction	The partner's objection is taken up and answered

Self-correction: look at the criterion you missed, write what went wrong, and write a better version of one sentence. The improved sentence is part of the work.

Step 5b. When a public slogan is covered, or cut from its wall Look again at the photograph of the Irpin gymnast after the wall was cut, above. Then look at this photograph: a work attributed to Banksy, hidden behind metal sheets at the Royal Courts of Justice. If a slogan speaks in public, who may cover it, and what remains when the wall leaves the street?

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Security staff and metal sheets hiding a work attributed to Banksy at the Royal Courts of Justice, London. Photograph by Matt Brown, 8 September 2025, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected. The image shows who may decide whether a public slogan stays visible.

A2 pathway

Complete: The work is hidden by... The gymnast was... I think the public should / should not still see the slogan, because...

B1 pathway

Write six to eight sentences. Compare a slogan that is hidden with a slogan that is cut from its wall. Use the three-rights distinction (the object, the image, public access) and however. Do not invent a legal rule for every city.

Step 6. Written record and homework

A2 pathway

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Complete: The wall was... The image is not the same as... The public should / should not... because...

B1 pathway

Write a short professional note (90 to 110 words) to the café owner, explaining the three questions and giving a recommendation. Do not invent a legal rule that the Art Buff case did not decide.

Homework. A2: make two flashcards, was removed and copyright, and learn them. B1: read your professional note aloud and record it, or rehearse it for a partner. Both pathways: look again at the Bristol stencil You don't need planning permission to build castles in the sky. Write two sentences: who might "own" that wall, and who can still see the work.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Lesson 4. Can anti-commercial art escape the market?

Question of the day: When a slogan criticises money and then meets a shop or an auction, what happens to its voice?

Activités langagières · BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019

- Réception orale. Two short film extracts, each viewed twice: the shredding at Sotheby's and the Dismaland trailer, training for compréhension de l'oral
- Réception écrite. Captions and short notes, including official-looking signs read as visual slogans
- Production orale en continu. A short explanation of a contradiction, and a presentation of a photograph to a visitor
- Interaction orale. A mini-debate on whether a sold critique keeps its voice
- Production écrite. A comparison and a short commentary, training for expression écrite
- Médiation. Explaining a contradiction (a gift-shop exit, a hotel beside a barrier) to someone who only sees a theme park or a luxury hotel

Descripteurs CECRL visés dans cette lesson.

A2

Can describe contrasts with simple comparatives, and write a short slogan sentence for an official-looking sign.

B1

Can explain a contradiction without reducing it to a simple accusation of hypocrisy, and compare three ways of meeting a work, with reasons.

Video exposure stays below ten minutes: the shredding extract is shown twice (about four minutes in total); the Dismaland extract is shown twice (about four minutes and fourteen seconds in total).

A2 outcome

Describe contrasts and compare two ways of encountering a work.

B1 outcome

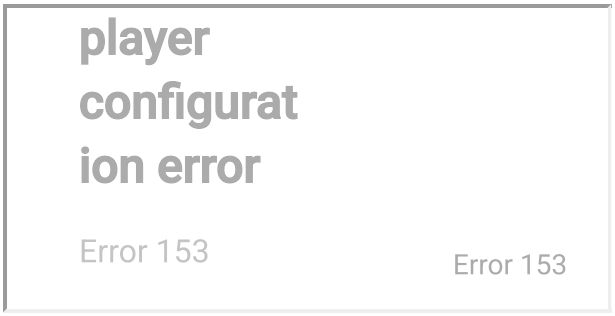

Explain a contradiction without reducing it to a simple accusation of hypocrisy.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Step 1 and 2. The shredding, from the artist's film

In October 2018, a framed version of Girl with Balloon was sold at Sotheby's in London. As the sale ended, the work passed through a mechanism in the frame and part of it was shredded. The transformed work was later given the title Love is in the Bin. It was sold again in 2021, for a reported price of about 18.6 million pounds. The price is a documented market event. It does not, by itself, prove the artist's exact intention.

We do not have an open-licence photograph of the shredded work. We watch a short extract from the film published by the artist, on the channel banksyfilm. The film is the artist's presentation of the event, not an independent investigation. The teacher previews it before class and checks that it can be shown.

Exact link: youtube.com/watch?v=vxkwRNIZgdY. Extract: 00:00 to 02:00. Source: banksyfilm, Shredding the Girl and Balloon: The Director's Half Cut.

First viewing. Number these elements in the order you see them: preparation, the auction, the audience reaction. Do not explain them yet.

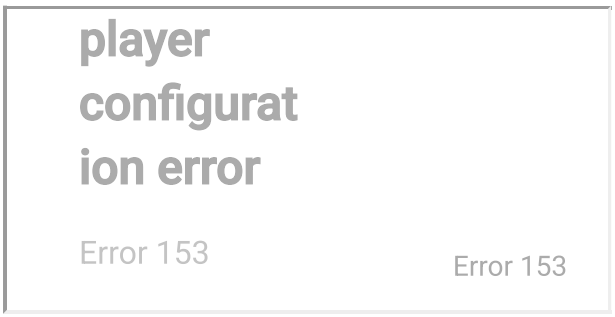

Second viewing. Note one visible event, and one question the footage cannot answer.

Exercise 1. Visible or unproven? Write V or U.

1. The work passes partly through a mechanism in the frame.
2. Every person in the room knew what would happen.
3. The event takes place in an auction room.
4. The artist wanted to destroy the market for the work.
5. The transformed work later sold for a very high price. (This is not in the two-minute extract: it comes from later reporting.)

Step 3. Dismaland, a temporary park

In 2015, Banksy created Dismaland, a temporary "bemusement park" in Weston-super-Mare. Many other artists took part. Do not attribute every object in a photograph to Banksy. The trailer is again from the channel banksyfilm, published on 25 August 2015.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Exact link: youtube.com/watch?v=V2NG-MgHqEk. Extract: 00:00 to 02:07. Source: banksyfilm, published 25 August 2015.

First viewing. Record three things you can see. Do not explain them yet.

Second viewing. Identify two contrasts between the promise of a theme park and what the trailer actually shows.

An overview of Dismaland, Weston-super-Mare, 2015, with deckchairs, a pond, a distant castle and a big wheel. Dismaland was a multi-artist project created by Banksy. Photograph by Florent Darrault, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artworks themselves remain protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

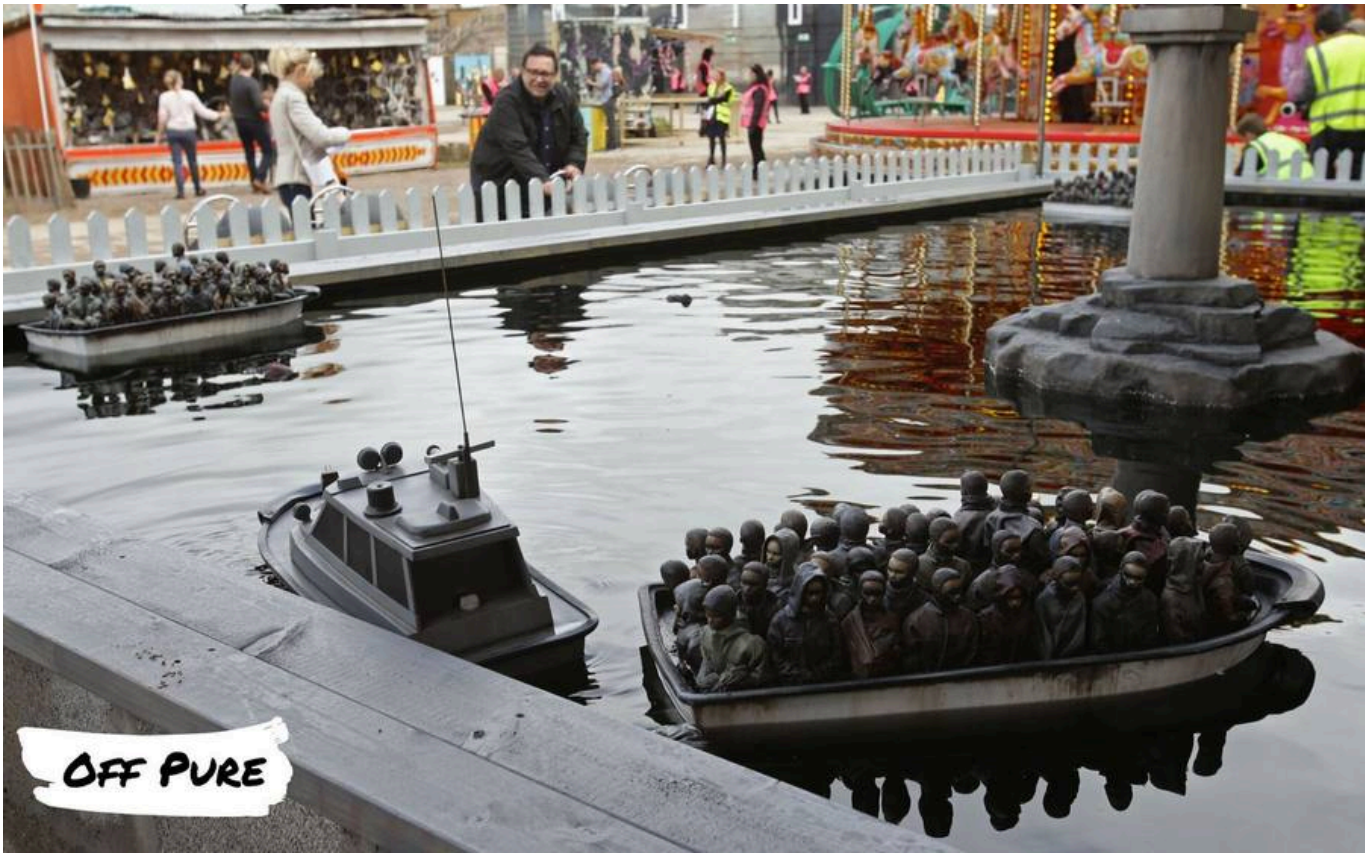

Dismaland, Weston-super-Mare, 2015: the crooked castle and a twisted mermaid figure in a moat. Banksy created the temporary park and invited many other artists. Do not attribute every object in the photograph to Banksy. Photograph by Rob Farrow, 24 September 2015, Geograph Britain and Ireland, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artworks themselves remain protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Dismaland, 2015: a stranded police vehicle in the water in front of the crooked castle. Multi-artist project. Photograph by Rob Farrow, 24 September 2015, Geograph Britain and Ireland, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artworks themselves remain protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A stand at Dismaland, 2015: visitors could steer small remote-controlled boats filled with figurines of migrants. This attraction is widely attributed to Banksy. Photograph by Off Pure, 29 August 2015, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

A visual slogan: four questions

Every work in this sequence is read as a speech act, a slogan in the form of a picture. For each image, answer:

1. What does it say? Write one sentence, as if it were a slogan.
2. To whom? Who is the image speaking to?
3. In what tone? Ironic, angry, playful, bitter, hopeful, warning, mocking, or another tone you can justify.
4. How does it speak? Name the visual devices: stencil, written words, official look, placement, contrast, a real object next to the painting, a contradiction between the words and the place.

Now read three more visual slogans. The first two were photographed at Dismaland (a multi-artist project: do not attribute every object to Banksy). The third is a large painted sign on Brick Lane, London.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A wooden sign at Dismaland, Weston-super-Mare, 2015: EXIT THROUGH THE GIFT SHOP, painted in official-looking white letters on a red board, with a hand-drawn arrow. The same phrase is the title of a 2010 film associated with Banksy. Photograph by Neil Owen,

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Geograph, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected. Dismaland was a multi-artist project: not every object there is by Banksy.

A mock official sign at Dismaland, Weston-super-Mare, 2015: Curfew, then the hours, then Social Cleansing. The layout imitates a British parking or restriction sign. Photograph by Neil Owen, Geograph, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected. Dismaland was a multi-artist project: not every object there is by Banksy.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A large painted sign on Brick Lane, London, widely attributed to Banksy: TO ADVERTISE HERE CALL 0800 BANKSY. Photograph by Wikimedia Commons user Justinc, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

Exercise 3b. Official language, used as a slogan. For Exit through the gift shop, for Social Cleansing, and for To advertise here call 0800 Banksy, write the slogan sentence, the audience, the tone, and the visual device (official look, arrow, advertising board, a phone number made from the artist's public name).

A2 pathway

Complete, for each sign: The words say... They look like... The tone is... The image mocks / denounces...

B1 pathway

Write a short paragraph for each. How does the official look help the sentence? What happens if a critique of the market ends with a gift shop, or if a critique of advertising uses the form of an advertisement?

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Step 4. Expanding your vocabulary and grammar

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
auction	a public sale in which the highest bidder wins	The work was sold at an auction in London.
to shred	to cut into strips	Part of the work was shredded in the frame.
commodity	something treated as an object of trade	A critical artwork can become a valuable commodity.
contrast	a clear difference between two things	There is a contrast between the park's promise and its appearance.
whereas	used to set two facts against each other	A theme park promises delight, whereas Dismaland looks disappointing on purpose.
although	used to admit one fact and then add a contrasting one	Although the gesture seemed to attack the sale, the work later sold for more.
to criticise	to point out what is wrong, in your view	The park seems to criticise entertainment and consumer culture.
hypocrisy	pretending to have principles that your actions contradict	A simple accusation of hypocrisy may be too thin for this case.

Grammar: comparatives (more disappointing than, less magical than, far more expensive than), whereas and although.

Exercise 4. Combine the two facts, using the word in brackets.

1. A theme park is supposed to be cheerful. Dismaland looks grim. (whereas)
2. The shredding looked like an attack on the auction. The work became even more valuable. (although)
3. The original mural was in the street. The auctioned work was in a framed sale. (more... than / whereas)
4. The castle should look fairytale-like. This castle looks crooked. (less... than)

Step 5. The Walled Off Hotel, a place that is already a slogan

In 2017, a hotel associated with Banksy opened in Bethlehem, beside the West Bank barrier. The name plays on the Waldorf hotels. The place is at once a hotel, a viewpoint, and a political statement. Guests pay to stay next to a wall that limits movement. That is already a contradiction worth describing carefully, without rushing to a single moral verdict.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

The Walled Off Hotel, Bethlehem, opened in 2017, a project associated with Banksy, standing beside the West Bank barrier. The name plays on the Waldorf hotel chain. Photograph by YellowFratello, Wikimedia Commons, CC0. The photograph is in the public domain as a photograph. The building, the decorations and any artworks remain protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

The entrance of The Walled Off Hotel, Bethlehem. Photograph by Davide Mauro, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The building and its decorations remain protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

The barrier in front of The Walled Off Hotel, covered with many paintings and messages by different people. Do not attribute every image on the wall to Banksy. Photograph by Wikimedia Commons user シャヲ一, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The paintings themselves remain protected.

The barrier photograph shows many paintings and messages by different people. Do not attribute every image on that wall to Banksy.

A2 pathway

Write four sentences: where the hotel is; what you can see on the entrance photograph; one contrast with an ordinary luxury hotel; one question you would ask a visitor.

B1 pathway

Write a short comparison (eight to ten lines) of three encounters with Banksy's world: a street mural, an auction room, and this hotel. Use whereas and although. End with a qualified judgement, not a one-word verdict.

Step 6. Mini-debate

Motion: "When critical art sells for millions, the criticism dies."

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A2 pathway

A2: 30 seconds for, 30 seconds against, then a 20-second personal decision. Frames: I agree / I do not agree, because... Although..., the work still...

B1 pathway

B1: one minute for, one minute against, then a 30-second qualified conclusion. You must refuse a simple accusation of hypocrisy, and explain at least two possible effects of the sale: it may weaken the critique, spread the image, or change its meaning.

Step 7. Written record and homework

A2 pathway

Complete: At the auction, I can see... Dismaland looks... than a usual park, because... I think selling the work may... because...

B1 pathway

Write a 100-word commentary on the question of the day, using although, whereas and one attributed fact (the 2021 sale, or the opening of the hotel in 2017).

Homework. A2: make flashcards for whereas, auction and contrast. B1: prepare a 45-second oral presentation of one photograph from today's lesson, for a visitor who has never heard of Dismaland or of the hotel. Both: do not treat the artist's intention as something the price can prove.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Lesson 5. Does a mural lose its voice when it leaves its wall?

Question of the day: If the place is part of the slogan, what remains when the image moves?

Activités langagières · BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019

- Réception écrite and visuelle. Photographs and captions: the place is read as part of the sentence
- Réception orale. A short teacher-read committee text, with a compte rendu, training for compréhension de l'oral
- Médiation. Explaining to others what the place adds to the slogan, and what would change if the image moved
- Production orale en continu and interaction orale. A public-art committee: a recommendation, then a group decision
- Production écrite. A written recommendation, training for expression écrite

Descripteurs CECRL visés dans cette lesson.

A2

Can explain a visible connection between an image and its site, and complete a short conditional: If the mural is removed, it may...

B1

Can compare conservation, public access and contextual meaning, and write a qualified recommendation with reasons.

A2 outcome

Explain a visible connection between an image and its surroundings.

B1 outcome

Compare conservation, public access and contextual meaning, and make a qualified recommendation.

Step 1 and 2. A gymnast on a ruined wall, in Irpin

In November 2022, several murals appeared in the Kyiv region. One of them, in Irpin, shows a rhythmic gymnast with a ribbon, as if she were balancing on a hole in a damaged building. This is not the handstand gymnast in Borodianka, a different mural, which Banksy posted on Instagram. The Irpin work is widely attributed to Banksy.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Look at the mural in its original place: the gymnast, the hole, and the ruined building form one sentence. You already saw, in Lesson 3, what the wall looked like after it was cut.

The same Irpin mural in its original setting: the gymnast appears to balance on a shell hole in a ruined building, with damaged blocks behind. Photograph by Rasal Hague, 18 November 2022, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

A visual slogan: four questions

Every work in this sequence is read as a speech act, a slogan in the form of a picture. For each image, answer:

1. What does it say? Write one sentence, as if it were a slogan.
2. To whom? Who is the image speaking to?
3. In what tone? Ironic, angry, playful, bitter, hopeful, warning, mocking, or another tone you can justify.
4. How does it speak? Name the visual devices: stencil, written words, official look, placement, contrast, a real object next to the painting, a contradiction between the words and the place.

The gymnast appears to balance on a hole in a ruined building: the hole is part of the sentence. In May 2023 the section of wall was dismantled, so that the image could be saved (you studied that photograph in Lesson 3). It was later moved to another site on the same street. Saving a work and taking it away from the hole that gave it meaning can be the same gesture, seen from two sides. If the place is part of the slogan, what does the slogan say after the move?

Exercise 1. Observation before interpretation. For each statement, write V (visible), I (interpretation) or N (cannot be established from the photographs alone).

1. The gymnast is painted above a dark hole in the wall.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

2. The hole was made by a shell.
3. The figure seems to balance as if the hole were a ball.
4. The section of wall was later cut out.
5. The people who removed it wanted to sell the work.

Step 3. Two more works from the same period

A mural widely attributed to Banksy: a child in a judogi throws a much larger adult. The work first appeared in Borodianka, Ukraine, in November 2022. Banksy did not identify the adult figure; readings that name a political leader remain interpretations. Photograph by Simon Höger, 19 February 2025, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected. The 2025 photograph shows the mural after the period of its first appearance; it may have been protected or moved.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A mural widely attributed to Banksy: two children play on an anti-tank obstacle as if it were a seesaw, Maidan Nezalezhnosti (Independence Square), Kyiv, 2022. Photograph by Rasal Hague, 6 November 2022, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

The judo mural first appeared in Borodianka. A child throws a much larger adult. Some viewers have identified the adult with a political leader. That reading must remain an interpretation: Banksy did not name the figure, and this sequence will not present the identification as a fact. The Kyiv photograph shows two children on a real anti-tank obstacle, used as a seesaw, on Independence Square. In both cases, the place is part of what the image says: the slogan cannot be reduced to a figure on a blank background.

Exercise 2. Match the work and the role of the site.

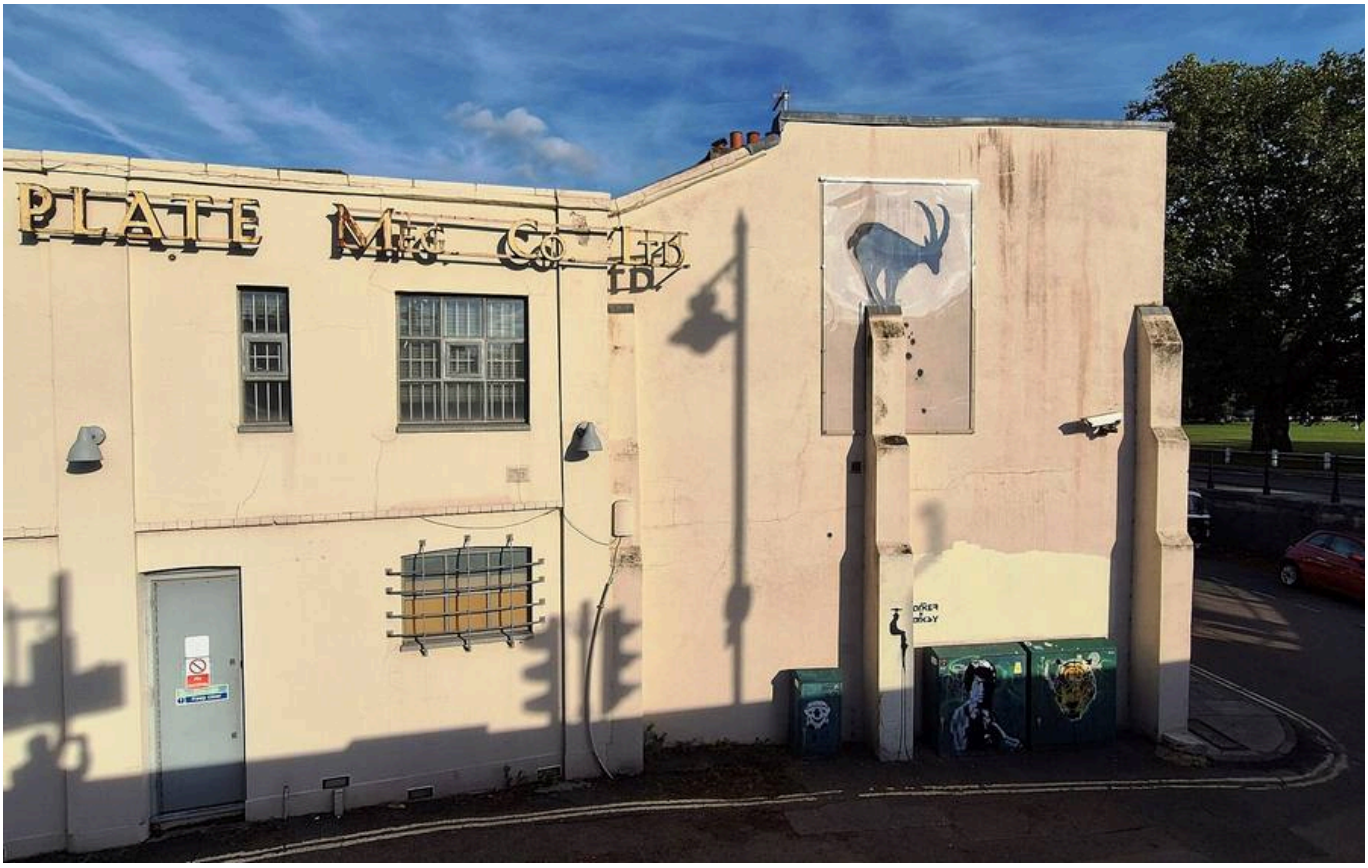

1. Gymnast in Irpin. 2. Pelicans in Walthamstow (next step). 3. Children in Kyiv. 4. Judo mural, first seen in Borodianka.

a. A military object becomes a piece of play. b. A hole in a ruined wall becomes a point of balance. c. A shop sign becomes part of the scene. d. A damaged place is the background for a smaller figure overcoming a larger one.

Step 4. London, August 2024: animals on ordinary walls

In August 2024, a series of animal murals appeared across London. The artist posted the works on the official Banksy Instagram, which is a public attribution of the series, not a civil identity. Two photographs are enough to see the point: the goat in Richmond stands on a real architectural ledge; the pelicans in Walthamstow interact with a real fish-and-chip shop sign. If you move only the painted animal, you lose the ledge, or you lose the sign.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A mural attributed to Banksy and posted on the artist's official Instagram: a goat on a narrow ledge, Richmond, London, August 2024, part of a series of animal works that appeared across the city. Photograph by Anthony Parkes, 14 September 2024, Geograph Britain and Ireland, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A mural attributed to Banksy and posted on the artist's official Instagram: pelicans interacting with a fish-and-chip shop sign, Walthamstow, London, August 2024. Photograph by Panicshouter, Wikimedia Commons, CC0. The photograph is in the public domain as a photograph. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A further example, in another city and another element: Migrant Child, painted in Venice in 2019 on a wall that rises from the water. This photograph was taken about three years later, when floods had already marked the work. The water, as in the Camden canal of Lesson 1, becomes part of what the image says.

A mural widely attributed to Banksy, Migrant Child, painted in Venice in 2019 on a wall rising from the water. This photograph was taken about three years later, when floods had already marked the work. Photograph by Steve Loughran, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

Exercise 2b. Write the slogan, with the place inside the sentence. For the gymnast, for the pelicans, and for the child in Venice, write: what the image says, to whom, in what tone, and what the place adds. Then complete: If this work leaves its wall, the slogan will / may...

A2 pathway

Complete one card for each work: The image says... The place adds... If it is moved, it may...

B1 pathway

Write a short paragraph for each. Explain how placement is a visual device, not only a backdrop. Compare Venice (water marks the work) with Camden in Lesson 1 (water completes a written sentence).

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Step 5. Expanding your vocabulary and grammar

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
site	the particular place where a work stands	The site is part of the meaning.
surroundings	what is around the work	The surroundings include rubble, a sign, or a ledge.
to conserve	to protect a work so that it lasts	The city may want to conserve the mural.
context	the situation that gives a work its meaning	If you remove the context, the image may say something else.
in order to	used to express a purpose	The wall was cut in order to save the painting.
because of	used to give a cause	The gymnast is striking because of the hole beneath her.
if + present, will / may	a possible future result	If the mural is removed, passers-by will no longer see it.
to relocate	to move something to a new place	The gymnast was later relocated on the same street.

Grammar: first conditional. If the mural is removed, it may be safer. If it is removed, it will lose its hole, its ledge, or its shop sign. Purpose: in order to save it. Cause: because of the surroundings.

Exercise 3. Complete with if, will, may, because of, or in order to.

1. _____ the pelicans are taken off the shop, they _____ lose the fish on the sign.
2. The gymnast was cut out _____ protect her from demolition.
3. The children are striking _____ the real metal obstacle they sit on.
4. _____ the goat is sold as a cut-out, visitors _____ see a goat, but not a goat on that ledge.

Exercise 4. Rewrite, keeping the same idea.

1. People removed the mural. They wanted to save it. (in order to)
2. The image is powerful. It stands on a ruined building. (because of)
3. We take the goat away. We lose the ledge. (If...)

Teacher-written listening (read twice)

> A local committee is discussing a fictional mural on a privately owned warehouse. The image is a child looking at a closed shutter. Some members want to cut the shutter out and show it in a museum, in order to protect it from the rain and from theft. Other members say that if the shutter leaves the street, the work will lose the place it was made for. A third group suggests a photograph in the museum and a protective screen on the original wall. Nobody in the room has the right to invent a legal rule for every city. They must recommend, and they must give reasons.

A2 pathway

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Note two options the committee discusses, and complete: If the mural is removed, it may... If it stays, it may...

B1 pathway

Restitute the three positions in connected sentences, then add your own recommendation, with in order to and a conditional.

Step 6. Public-art committee

Your class is the committee. The fictional warehouse mural can stay, move to a museum, or be photographed and protected in place. You must make a recommendation for Lesson 6's exhibition file.

A2 pathway

In pairs, 45 seconds each: give your recommendation with should and If... will / may. Then agree on one sentence to report to the class.

B1 pathway

In groups of three, three minutes: one student defends removal in order to conserve the work; one defends keeping it in place; one must propose a third way and write the group's final sentence. Use although, because of and a conditional.

Step 7. Written record and homework

A2 pathway

Complete: The gymnast is striking because of... If the mural is removed, it may... I think it should... in order to...

B1 pathway

Write a 100-word recommendation for the committee, comparing the Irpin gymnast (saved and moved) with the London pelicans (still tied to a shop sign). Keep interpretations and facts apart.

Homework. Choose one work from the sequence. Complete a full observation card: title or description, place, date, photographer, what you can see, what the place adds, what you cannot establish, and (B1) what would change if the work left its wall. Bring the card to Lesson 6. You will use it in the final task.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Lesson 6. Exhibiting Banksy without owning the name

Question of the day: How can a mediator present a visual slogan without overstating evidence or erasing the street?

Activités langagières · BO spécial n° 5 du 11 avril 2019

- Médiation. The central professional task: explaining a visual slogan and its place to a visitor, without adding facts that are not in the sources
- Production écrite. An ethical exhibition label and a recommendation, training for the expression écrite of Situation A (a connected text in English)
- Production orale en continu and interaction orale. Final oral: a presentation then a visitor's question, Situation B practice, not the CCF itself
- Réception écrite. The brief, the criteria, and labels that must be repaired

Descripteurs CECRL visés dans cette lesson.

A2

Can present a work in simple terms, write a short accurate label, and answer a visitor's question with should and according to.

B1

Can give a prepared presentation, distinguish fact from claim, recommend with reasons, and respond to an objection, in a professional tone.

If thirty individual presentations cannot be assessed live in fifteen minutes, students record in pairs on school-approved equipment and submit the recording privately. The teacher assesses the recordings after class. If recording is unavailable, written work is collected in this lesson and additional oral time is scheduled. Do not pretend that a single teacher can hear thirty full performances in a quarter of an hour.

The final brief

Your class is a cultural mediation team advising a local exhibition entitled Banksy: Public Walls, Private Names. The organisers want to show photographs of murals, and to discuss a fictional proposal: a mural on a privately owned warehouse would be removed and shown indoors. Look first at how a slogan changes when it enters an exhibition, a shop, or a queue of visitors.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

The words WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING AT? displayed on a wall at an exhibition of work associated with Banksy, in Amsterdam, 2018. This is an exhibition presentation of a slogan, not the original street work near Hyde Park (that original is shown in Lesson 1). Photograph by MMLDND, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

A stencil widely attributed to Banksy, on a stone plinth near the Palace of Westminster: This is not a photo opportunity, with the clock tower of Big Ben out of focus behind it. Photograph by Kris Krug, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 2.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artwork itself remains protected.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

The gift shop of the Banksy Museum in Krakow: framed prints, books and souvenirs of famous motifs, including the girl with a balloon. Photograph by Sdkb, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 4.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The artworks reproduced in the shop remain protected. A commercial museum is not Pest Control, and a print in a shop is not the original wall.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

The facade of Dismaland, the temporary 'bemusement park' organised in the old Tropicana lido at Weston-super-Mare in the summer of 2015. Photograph by Geof Sheppard, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 3.0. The photograph is shared under that licence. The site was a multi-artist project.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Crowds queuing on the Beach Lawns in Weston-super-Mare to visit Dismaland in 2015. Photograph by Geof Sheppard, Wikimedia Commons, CC BY-SA 3.0. The photograph is shared under that licence.

A visual slogan: four questions

Every work in this sequence is read as a speech act, a slogan in the form of a picture. For each image, answer:

1. What does it say? Write one sentence, as if it were a slogan.
2. To whom? Who is the image speaking to?
3. In what tone? Ironic, angry, playful, bitter, hopeful, warning, mocking, or another tone you can justify.
4. How does it speak? Name the visual devices: stencil, written words, official look, placement, contrast, a real object next to the painting, a contradiction between the words and the place.

The Amsterdam wall shows WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING AT? as an exhibition display, not as the original street work of Lesson 1. The stencil near Big Ben says This is not a photo opportunity, on a tourist site. The Krakow shop sells framed prints of famous motifs. Dismaland's facade and queues show how a public is invited to visit. Before you write a label, say what each of these images "says" about looking, visiting and selling.

Each student must:

1. Present one artwork from the sequence first as a visual slogan (what it says, to whom, in what tone, and with which devices), then give the place, the date, what is visible, and why the location is part of the sentence.
2. Distinguish a documented event from an attributed identity claim. The civil name, if you mention it, stays a claim, with its source.
3. Recommend what should happen to the fictional warehouse mural, with a reason.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

4. Answer a visitor's question (your partner asks it).
5. Write a short ethical exhibition label, and a short recommendation.

Nobody is asked to discover a private address, to identify relatives, to contact a suspected artist, or to investigate a private person.

Step 1. Expanding your vocabulary, last review

Word or phrase	Meaning	Example
exhibition label	a short text that helps a visitor understand a displayed work	The label must be accurate and modest.
to acknowledge	to recognise or to state something openly	The label should acknowledge that the name is a press claim.
to qualify	to limit a claim so that it stays accurate	Qualify the headline with according to.
to recommend	to propose a course of action	We recommend keeping a photograph in the street and a copy in the room.
to consult	to ask for another person's view or for a source	The organisers should consult the wall's owner and the neighbourhood.
mediator	a person who helps the public meet a work or an idea	A mediator explains, and does not overstate.
ethical	concerned with what is right to do	An ethical label does not pretend we know more than we do.

Exercise 1. Repair these labels. They are too sure, or they mix categories. Rewrite each one.

1. "This mural was painted by Robin Gunningham in 2022."
2. "Banksy wants all his works to stay in the street, so selling them is illegal."
3. "This photograph is free to use because it is on the internet, and so is the artwork."
4. "The High Court decided that the public owns every Banksy mural."

Step 2. Written assessment (15 minutes)

You work alone. You may use your observation card from Lesson 5, and the classroom sentence about Reuters from Lesson 2. You may not search the web for a private name.

A2 pathway

A2 written task /20.

1. Write an exhibition label of four to six short sentences for one work: the slogan sentence (what it says, to whom, in what tone), what we can see, where it was, why the place matters, and one accurate sentence about identity (you may write that the artist's civil name is not confirmed).

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

2. Write three sentences recommending what should happen to the fictional warehouse mural, with should and because.

B1 pathway

B1 written task /20.

1. Write an exhibition label of eight to ten sentences: the work as a visual slogan (what it says, to whom, in what tone, and which devices), description, location, one documented event, one attributed claim clearly marked as a claim, and a sentence about photographic licences and remaining rights in the artwork.
2. Write a short professional recommendation (90 to 120 words) on the fictional warehouse mural, using the three-rights distinction and a conditional. Qualify anything that is not a fact.

A2 written grid /20

Criterion	0 to 3	4 to 6	7
Réalisation de la tâche: label (slogan, work, place, what is visible)	Incomplete or confused	The work and the place are identified, with some description	Clear description, and the place is given a simple role
Identity and accuracy	A civil name is presented as a fact, or the issue is ignored in a misleading way	The text avoids a false certainty	An accurate cautious sentence, with or without a named source
Recommendation	No clear advice	A recommendation with a simple reason	A clear should, with because, that a visitor can follow

Plus 0 to 6 for language (vocabulary from the sequence, and intelligible syntax), adjusted so that the total is /20. The teacher records the language mark in the same spirit as the oral grids: 0 to 2 limited, 3 to 4 adequate reuse, 5 to 6 secure reuse of there is, may, should, according to.

B1 written grid /20

Criterion	0 to 3	4 to 6	7
Label: description, place, rights	Incomplete, or categories mixed	Solid description and location, some caution	Description, location, and a clear note on photographs and remaining rights
Attribution and identity	A claim is treated as a fact	A source is named, with a small slip	Documented events and claims are kept apart; no civil name as fact
Recommendation	No usable advice	A reasoned recommendation	Three rights, a conditional, a qualified professional tone

Plus 0 to 6 for language, as above, with expected control of although, whereas, the passive, and accurate attribution.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Step 3. Oral assessment (about 15 minutes, in simultaneous pairs)

A2 pathway

A2 oral, /20. Continuous speaking, 40 to 50 seconds: present your work as a visual slogan (what it says, to whom, in what tone), then what you can see, where it is, and why the place matters. Interaction, about 40 seconds: your partner is a visitor and asks one of these questions: "Who is Banksy, really?" or "Can we just cut this wall and show it here?" You answer without presenting a civil name as a fact, and you give a simple recommendation.

B1 pathway

B1 oral, /20. Continuous speaking, about 90 seconds: present your work as a visual slogan (what it says, to whom, in what tone, and with which devices), explain the role of the site, and include one documented fact and one attributed claim, clearly distinguished. Interaction, about one minute: your partner plays a visitor who wants a sure name and a sure legal answer. You qualify, you attribute, and you recommend. You respond to a follow-up objection.

A2 oral grid, summative /20

Criterion	0 to 2	3 to 4	5
Production orale en continu: the slogan, the work and the place	Too little, or the work is not identified	A description, with a simple mention of place	Visible details, the place, and a reason why the place matters
Identity and honesty	A civil name is given as a fact	The student avoids a false certainty	A clear cautious formulation, if the question arises
Language	Little language from the sequence	Frames are used, with some errors that do not block meaning	Vocabulary reused; there is, may, should, according to used intelligibly
Interaction	The question is not really answered	A relevant short answer	A clear answer to the visitor, with a recommendation

B1 oral grid, summative /20

Criterion	0 to 2	3 to 4	5
Production orale en continu: slogan, work, site, evidence	Incomplete	A connected presentation, with some distinction of categories	A clear presentation; fact and claim are kept apart; the site has a role
Ethics of the name and of the wall	Overstatement, or no recommendation	A cautious position, with a reason	Accurate attribution, a qualified recommendation, no investigation of a private person
Language	Limited control	Sequence language attempted, with slips	Secure reuse; qualification (according to, may, although); intelligible syntax

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0

Criterion	0 to 2	3 to 4	5
Interaction	Little response to the visitor	A relevant reply	The objection is taken up; the answer stays accurate and professional

Step 4. Self-correction

Using the teacher's grid (A2 or B1), write:

1. The criterion I missed, or the one I only partly reached.
2. What went wrong, in my own words.
3. An improved version of one spoken sentence and one written sentence, following that criterion.

The improved version is part of the assessment, not an optional extra.

Step 5. Final written record

Copy and keep this principle, then complete it in your own words:

> A mural on a wall can have an author without a confirmed civil identity. A press investigation can be serious and still remain a claim until it is confirmed. Owning a wall is not the same as owning every right in the image, and it is not the same as public access. As a mediator, I should... I should not...

Step 6. Homework

Revise your flashcards from the six lessons. A2: be ready to present your work again in 40 seconds, with the improved sentence included. B1: polish your exhibition label and be ready to read it aloud. This work trains Situation B (continuous speaking and interaction) and the expression écrite of Situation A. It can be reused later in CCF practice, if the teacher so decides. It is not, by itself, the examination. The CCF takes place in the last year of the cycle; this is Seconde.

© 2026 Madame Carole Paoli Pompougnac · CC BY-NC-SA 4.0